Preface

Although Part Three focuses on (Johann) Christian Ensminger and his descendants in America, the record of his ancestors is extracted from Part One and repeated in this Part Three. This repetition of Christian's ancestors and certain other information presented below from Part One allows Part Three to exist as a stand-alone document.

TWO MEN NAMED HANS

In 1993, Brendan Wehrung, who was pursuing detailed studies of early Ensminger families in Diemeringen and Waldhambach, discovered a 1977 series of indexes of various church books of that era by Dr. Gerhard Hein collectively titled Die Einwohner Krummen Elsaß und seiner Umgebung vor 1700. Mr. Wehrung had earlier noted the appearance of a Hans Einssminger in the church book for Bockenheim, as well as Hans Einsminger of Diemeringen, heretofore presumed to be the first to bear that surname. Using Diemeringen records alone, a line of descent can be traced from Hans of Diemeringen to Ensmingers who emigrated to the United States--but cannot be connected to those of Waldhambach.

Dr. Hein suggests a different scenario, in which two men names Hans--of different surname and occupation--came to be called "Einsminger," presumably because of their place of origin. Dr. Hein presents the following:

Hans Meyer "der Einssminger" (died before 29 Aug 1621 in Bockenheim) who fathered 12 children. The oldest, Margaret, was born 10 October 1601; the 11th was George, b 23 April 1620, presumably father of the three Waldhambach brothers. His is today the earliest surviving historical record bearing a person clearly traceable as an Ensminger--Hans was a godparent on 29 August 1598.

Hans Gerber/Einsminger (died 26 Dec 1630 in Diemeringen). He married Christina Gut on 17 Jun 1600. Hans' son Carl was the father of Adam of Diemeringen, born 24 Jan 1630. Hans of Diemeringen was the first to be associated, in 1605, with "Ensminger" used as a surname.

The exciting aspect of Dr. Hein's scenario is that he places both men later to be known as Hans Ensminger in family settings. While this presents certain problems, not the least of which is whether they shared a blood tie (an unanswerable question since no records exist to tell us), it also resolves certain inconsistencies found in earlier presentations which sought to combine Ensminger records from Bockenheim with those of Diemeringen.

It is appropriate to consider the possible relationship of the two families that came to bear the name Ensminger. On the surface, none exists, but in the occupations of the two founders--if their surnames reflect their occupations--lies a clue. Peter Gerber (tanner) of Diemeringen and Hans Meyer (dairy farmer) of Bockenheim both dealt in cattle products. As has been seen from occupations chosen by some descendants of Carl of Diemeringen, the slaughter of cattle and various workings of leather were family preoccupations. A dairy farmer would be a producer of a tanner's raw material. One difference is that the original "ss" of Bockenheim was preserved in Waldhambach as "ß" through the entire 18th century, until the French Revolution. (This may reflect nothing more than a writing convention, dropped in the face of the new government, or have been intrinsic to the surname.)

It is also interesting to speculate as to how far removed from Ensming the two might have been. Hans Meyer, "the man of Ensming" may have been born there, as might Hans, son of Peter Gerber. There may have been no relationship at all. For the sake of argument, assuming that the two named Hans were of the same generation and shared a common grandfather in Insming, the closest possible relationship between Adam of Diemeringen (great grandson of Peter) and the three brothers of Waldhambach would have been fourth cousins, which explains why, although living only 2.8 km apart, there was no established connection found (in the form of reciprocal appearances as godparents at Ensminger christenings) between the Ensmingers of Diemeringen and Waldhambach. It now seems clear that, from the beginning of the 17th century, Ensminger families of Diemeringen had no close ties to those first found in Bockenheim (later Waldhambach, Mattstall and the United States).

Ensmingers still live in this region in Bettwiller, Burbach, Diemeringen, Drulingen, Harskirchen, Hoenheim, La Petite Pierre, Mundolsheim, Strasbourg, Schilllersdorf, Schiltighem and Waldhambach. Historical records exist for their ancestry in Adamswiller (1731-1778), Bettwiller, Büthen (1749-1787), Diedendorf (1698-1787), Domfessel (1624, 1628), Drulingen, Durstel, Langensoultzbach, Lorentzen (1698-1759), La Petite Pierre (Lützelstein) (1746-1766), Mattstall, Sarre-Union (Bockenheim), Tieffenbach (1735-1761), Volksberg and Wolfskirchen.

Origin of the People of Alsace

The following discussion, based on information found in Wikipedia, brings to light the origin of the people of Alsace. Nomadic hunters inhabited Alsace during prehistoric times. Celts began to settle in Alsace around 1500 BCE and cleared and cultivated the land. The Roman legions of Julius Caesar conquered Alsace in the 1st century BCE and Romanized the area. The primary land use became the establishment of vineyards and production of wine. The Alemanni, a Germanic people, invaded the area in the 5th century CE but they were in turn conquered by the Franks, another Germanic people. Alsace became a Frankish duchy and the area was Christianized and colonized, eventually becoming part of the Holy Roman Empire until the 17th century. The territory was divided into secular and ecclesiastical lordships and municipalities. Strasbourg and other Alsatian cities became important trade centers. Alsatian cities gradually became free from their feudal overlords with the help of the emperors. Protestantism developed in Alsace during the Reformation and Strasbourg became the center of Alsatian Protestantism. Strasbourg's Protestant influence was countered by the resolute Roman Catholicism of the Habsburgs, who tried to eradicate heresy in upper Alsace.

French influence became apparent in Alsace late in the 16th century during the Wars of Religion and grew during the Thirty Years' War. Alsatian cities, caught between the opposing Catholic and Protestant sides, felt their liberties threatened and appealed to France for help. France became an informal protectorate over Alsace and later established full French control during the reign of Louis XIV. The French monarchy allowed Alsace to have significant autonomy under the French crown during the 18th century, and their status outside the French customs system allowed Alsatian cities to develop a flourishing transit trade. The administrative incorporation of Alsace into France was completed by the French Revolution (1789), when the area became the department of Bas-Rhin and its existence as a separate province was ended.

A coalition of German states, led by Prussia, defeated France during the Franco-German War that raged 1870-1871 and created a unified Germany. Alsace was detached from France and became part of the German Empire. Following the defeat of Germany in World War I, Alsace and part of the region of Lorraine were returned to France under the Treaty of Versailles. Germany again annexed Alsace in the early 1940s but Alsace was returned to France after the end of World War II.

The historical language of Alsace is Alsatian, a mostly Alemannic Germanic dialect. The people of Alsace continued to speak Alsatian after Alsace was officially incorporated into France, but the use of French spread among the upper classes. Today most Alsations primarily speak French, the official language of France.

ENSMINGER OF DIEMERINGEN

The focus of this Part Three is on the families of Diemeringen.

Although learned treatises assure us that surnames appeared in the 15th century, it is quite clear from the earliest surviving church records (ca. 1600) of Diemeringen that some people had yet to acquire a permanent second name.

Dr. Gerhard Hein's contention is that Peter Gerber--or perhaps, once gerber (= tanner) of Ensming--had a son Hans, who late in life became known as Hans "of Ensming," that is, the "Einsminger" (as the surname was first spelled). There were a number of Gerber families in Diemeringen, but no other explanation as to why Peter's grandchildren would have adopted a new surname (albeit sporadically at first), nor why Hans' burial record shows him as "Hans Eynsminger der gerber." The oldest child of Hans Gerber was Peter, born 12 Nov 1601. Carl, the first to be consistently identified as "Einsminger," was born 14 July 1605 and died 18 Jul 1666. There were at least eight other children, but infant mortality was high in those days. Plague decimated the Peter Gerber's family in 1597, and several Gerber/Einsminger children died during the 1630's. In addition, fighting associated with the 30 Years War (1618-48) occurred to the south in 1635, by which time the Ensminger surname was firmly attached to the families of Diemeringen.

Although the Ensminger surname was to spread throughout this corner of Alsace over the course of the next century, the Diemeringen branch was to be perpetuated by the thinnest of threads. Of the acknowledged or presumed sons of Hans, Peter's family was virtually wiped out by the end 1633. The high rate of infant mortality may also account for the children of Hermann, although Dr. Hein insists that he should be known as Becker (Hermann the bäcker = baker). In any case, no descendants are traceable by either surname. If nothing else, the 30 Years War made record-keeping almost impossible in some areas.

Adam Ensminger--son of Carl and grandson of Hans--was the survivor from whose parentage most later Ensmingers of Diemeringen could trace their ancestry. He also has the distinction of being the third great grandfather of three emigrants to the United States. A detailed study of this line, proceeding through Adam (1630-1693), Conrad (1711-1775) and Carl (bp 1740) is found in Robert D. Sherry's 1990 book, An Ensminger Family from Alsace: The Descendants of Conrad Ensminger and Carolina Gaupp from Diemeringen, Alsace, France, Early Settlers of Tonawanda and Amherst Townships, Erie County, New York.

Diemeringen shares one unfortunate bond with Ensming - both witnessed trial and executions for witchcraft. Synnel, wife of Hans Stumpf, was accused of sorcery in November 1608 and burned alive in Ensming's public square early the next year. Some 63 years later Diemeringen experienced the same madness, as between 1671 and 1673 a dozen people, many of them elderly widows, were tried, beheaded and their bodies burned. Among that number was Ottilia Enßminger (vulgo gerber Ottel = "commonly known as Ottilia the tanner"), widow of Carl Ensminger, the tanner.

It is not known if the replacement of "s" by "ß" (German double "ss") in mid- and late-century church records is significant. Diemeringen records returned to a single "s" in the 18th century. After Alsace's assimilation into France, the Ensminger surname was no longer recorded as Enßminger in official French records. Records for descendants of Peter Gerber reflect how the father's name was written at the child's baptism.

As noted above, the earliest evidence of this Ensminger family was discovered in Diemeringen, Alsace. Ensminger ancestors lived in several villages mentioned in this book that were then within the provinces of Lorraine and Alsace. The administrative incorporation of the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine into France during the French Revolution was completed in 1789. The province of Alsace became the Department of Bas-Rhin, Alsace, France. The province of Lorraine included four Departments, including the Department of Moselle, France. The French legislature passed territorial reform in 2014 that resulted in the merger of the Alsace administrative region with Champagne-Ardenne and Lorraine to form Alsace-Champagne-Ardenne-Lorraine.

After the French Revolution, some German place names were changed. Lützelstein, Alsace became La Petite Pierre, Bas-Rhin, Alsace, France. The Alsatian towns of Bockenheim and Neu-Saawerden were unified 16 Jun 1794 and the name for the unified towns is Sarr-Union, Bas-Rhin, Alsace, France. Hambach, Alsace; Hambach, Bas-Rhin, Alsace; and Waldhambach, Bas-Rhin, Alsace all refer to the same city.

The following map shows villages in the former provinces of Alsace and Lorraine where this members of this Ensminger family lived. The former province of Alsace is now the Department of Bas-Rhin, Alsace, France. The portion of the former province of Lorraine included in the map (shown with a yellow background) is now within the Department of Moselle, Lorraine, France. Some members of this family continued to reside in the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine which became incorporated into France during the French Revolution. Other members of this family moved to municipalities that located within the modern borders of Germany. The village of Diemeringen is shown in the upper quarter of the following map, near the middle of lower portion of that quarter.

Immigration to America

In the spring of 1763 (Johann) Christian Ensminger (later Entzminger), age 53, with his wife (Catharine) Elizabeth and 5 children left their home village of Appenhofen, Pfalz (8 miles south of Landau) for America. By fall they were in South Carolina joining the German colony on Broad River (now Columbia). Here Christian settled on Hollenshed Creek (west of Broad River) and got a 300-acre land grant 8 March 1770, surveyed 28 Jan 1771 (now Lexington County, South Carolina).

His oldest son, Peter, got 100 acres on Cedar Creek, across the river from his father - grant 14 Oct 1767, survey 2 Mar 1768. It was northeast of Broad River (now Richland County, South Carolina). Peter died in 1782 - single.

A second son, Christian, lived in Lexington County until his death, probably about 1805.

The third son, Frederick, lived in Richland County, dying there in 1808.

The name Ensminger became Entzminger in South Carolina - both pronounced the same, namely Ents' - minger. There were many spellings in South Carolina. The Entzmingers in South Carolina descend from Frederick Jr who had nine children. Frederick Sr had eleven children, but only 4 had issue - two daughters, Frederick Jr, and Ezra.

After landing at Charleston the "poor Protestants lately from Germany" were given money - "cash paid to new settlers" - adults £ 35, children £ 21. The names of Christian, wife and children are listed. They all received money. In Germany the middle name is the call name. Catharine Elizabeth was Elizabeth in Germany, in the civil records of South Carolina Catharine. In 1850 there were no Entzmingers in Lexington County. Sons of Frederick were in Richland (Peter and John) and in Fairfield (Frederick Jr and Ezra).

(Johann) Christian Ensminger was baptized 1 Nov 1709 at Diemeringen, Alsace - 70 km west of Appenhofen. His father, (John) Peter, a blacksmith, was baptized 20 Nov 1676. Peter married 5 Apr 1701 Catharine Dorothea (daughter of Andreas) Schoenberger, baptized 2 Aug 1677, died 26 Sep 1731. Christian was one of nine children. See Ensminger of Alsace and Pennsylvania, Part One, pages 8 and 9.

The Diemeringen record says Christian went to Appenhofen and then in 1763 to America. His ancestors can be traced to Peter who died in Diemeringen in 1797. The family attended the parish church at Billigheim. Here are recorded the marriages and baptisms. The father, Peter, may be the Peter who was a sponsor in 1752 at the baptism of Christian. He would have been 76 and may have gone to Appenhofen to be with his family. A (John) Jacob Ensminger of Diemeringen was married 19 Aug 1742 to (Mary) Regina (?) - Billigheim Record.

Although this Part Three focuses on Christian Ensminger and his descendants in America, the record of his ancestors is extracted from Part One and repeated in this Part Three. This lets Part Three exist as a stand-alone document.

As noted earlier, the lineage for the first six generations of Peter Gerber's Diemeringen branch of the Ensminger family is repeated in this Part Three from Part One. Surnames for those children reflect how their fathers were named in baptism, marriage or death records.

The lineage of (Johann) Christian Ensminger, the focus of this Part Three, picks up in Generation Six, with Peter Gerber alone being Generation One. Except for the Peter Gerber descendants listed in Part One and repeated in the first six generations of this Part Three, the remainder of Peter Gerber's descendants are not included in this book. The section number 18 assigned to Christian's name in this Part Three is the same number 18 carried forward from Part One.

Christian changed his surname to Entzminger in later life and his descendants that remained in South Carolina continued to use the Entzminger surname.

Christian's middle son, also named Christian (1752- ca 1805), had a son David W who moved to Catahoula Parish, LA prior to the 1810 census. David W and his descendants changed their surname from Entzminger to Ensminger. The Ensminger-surnamed descendants of David W Ensminger in Louisiana are included in this Part Three as the Louisiana Ensminger branch of the South Carolina Entzminger family.

Another source for information used in this book comes from a 1992 book by Donald Edwin Ensminger titled On and On to Eternity, a Record of the Ensminger Family in America, third edition dated 1992. Donald is member of the Ensminger family that immigrated to Pennsylvania and is not a member of the Ensminger family documented in this Part Three. He spent many years researching, conducted numerous personal interviews with Ensminger family members, wrote hundreds of letters and had numerous telephone conversations. He traveled thousands of miles to visit government offices, organizations and institutions to view records, books and microfilm.

One section of the On and On to Eternity book documents his research of the Ensmingers of Louisiana. While his research on the Louisiana Ensmingers is very solid, his information about the earliest Louisiana ancestors is flawed. His book infers that the Ensmingers who first settled in Louisiana are descendants of a Frederick Ensminger who came to America in 1751 from Alsace. Not much is known about the Frederick who came to America in 1751 from Alsace but if he had sons there is no evidence they migrated to South Carolina from Pennsylvania. As this Part Three shows, the South Carolina Ensminger family descends from Christian Ensminger (b ca 1709, d 1755) who emigrated directly from Alsace to South Carolina. As noted above, Christian's grandson, David W Ensminger b ca 1788, d 1844, migrated from South Carolina to Louisiana. However, we are grateful for the information in his book which helped this writer confirm and supplement information on the Louisiana Ensminger family.

Thomas Aaron Jr Entzminger began researching his family in 1994, using resources at the Welton Street African American Library as well as at the Denver Central Library, poring over family history books, index books, census records, and old microfilm that was available in the genealogy and history collections. It was at the Denver Central Library that Thomas made his first major find. With the help of James Jeffery, a Genealogy Collection Specialist at the library, Thomas discovered his great-great grandparents in the 1870 Census for Richland County, South Carolina. Later this find led Thomas to learn the name of his Entzminger ancestor born in Alsace in the early 1700's.

Christian Ensminger and his sons settled in South Carolina and became owners of plantations and slaves in Richland County, South Carolina near Blythewood. Thomas W. Entzminger, a later relative born 1815, had three children with his slave girl Victoria including one son William E. Entzminger in 1859. Thomas W Entzminger and Victoria are the great-great grandparents referenced in the previous paragraph that Thomas Aaron Jr Entzminger found on the 1870 census. Thomas and Victoria's son William E Entzminger and William's wife Caroline Jackson are the great grandparents of Thomas Aaron Jr Entzminger. After several years of research, which included meeting with non-African American descendants of his German immigrant family, Thomas wrote a book. His book titled Genealogies of African-American Families in Southwestern New York State (1830-1955) is in remembrance of the lives and histories of his friends and family living in upstate New York. His book, referenced on page 29 of Part One that lists Other Ensminger Histories, documents the existence of nearly five hundred African-American and mixed race families living in the Allegany, Cattaraugus and Chautauqua County region of rural western New York dating back to the earliest days of the state. Copies of his book can be found in Denver's Welton Street Blair-Caldwell African American Research Library and the Western History and Genealogy Section of the Denver Public Library.

Order of Arrangement and Explanatory Notes

In order to ensure a systematic arrangement and facilitate reference, this Part Three arranges descendants by generations. The patriarch of this family – Peter Gerber - alone makes up the first generation. His sons, including Hans Gerber/Ensminger, make up the second generation. The grandchildren of Peter Gerber make up the third generation, the great grandchildren of Peter Gerber make up the fourth generation, and so on through succeeding generations. Each generation is arranged in a separate section within this Part Three. The small figure to the right of each man's name (superscript font size) indicates that man's generation. This new arrangement of lineages by generations will make future updates of this book easier to accomplish.

After the name of a man, known facts are listed that may include his spouse(s), their birth dates, marriage dates, death dates, occupations, burial locations and other facts of special interest. Below the name of the head of the household appears the names of any children, all of which are numbered with lower case Roman numerals, e.g., i, ii, iii, and so forth.

Data for a man who is single or married with no children are listed under the father. A married Ensminger or Entzminger son with descendants is carried forward to the next generation. Data for lines of Ensminger and Entzminger women are limited to 3 generations - the daughter and her spouse(s), children and their spouse(s), and any grandchildren. Information on an Ensminger or Entzminger woman and her spouse(s) and her children and grandchildren is also listed under the woman's father. Information on the woman's grandchildren is limited to the names of the grandchildren and his or her spouse(s). This limited information helps keep the book more concise and keeps the focus of the book on the Ensminger and Entzminger surnames. There are occasions that an Ensminger or Entzminger woman had at least one son that was given the Ensminger or Entzminger surname. In those special cases, the daughter with a male Ensminger or Entzminger descendant is assigned a section number and carried forward to the next generation. This enables the woman's Ensminger or Entzminger son to continue his line forward to the next generation.

The Arabic number preceding a man's name and the plus sign (+) following the name indicate that the record is carried forward to another generation.

The "†" symbol following a person's name indicates that no further information about the individual is known.

The following abbreviations were used in Part Two and may be used in this Part Three: "aft" means after, "appl'n" means application, "b" means birth, "bef" means before, "bp" means baptism, "bur" means buried, "c" means christening, "ca" (circa) means around or about, "conf" means confirmation, "dau" means daughter, "DOB" means date of birth, "GAR" means Grand Army of the Republic, "invalid" pension means a disability pension, "m" means married, "unmd" means unmarried, "nat" means naturalized, "n.c." means no children, "poss" means possibly, "WPA" means Work Projects Administration, "WW I" means World War I, "WW II" means World War II.

As a key to the method of tracing one's ancestry back to Peter Gerber one may refer to the record of (Johann) Christian Entzminger. The record will show the number 11 before the name of (Johann) Christian's father, Johann Peter. Turning back to the record for Johann Peter will show the number 6 before the name of Johann Peter's father Adam, and so forth back to the name of Peter Gerber. Descendants can be traced the opposite way by turning forward to the numbers for the sons of (Johann) Christian and succeeding generations. Using this method, once the desired name is located, any line can be traced backward or forward entirely by the numbers.

This digital book is searchable. After opening this book with a pdf reader, a keyboard shortcut will open a "Find" window so the reader can search the document. For a PC, press the Ctrl + F key. For a MAC, press the Command + F key. The search feature is not case-sensitive. A word will find all exact matches, whether or not in bold type. With those exceptions, a search will find only an exact match. For example, a search for "Frederick Entzminger" (1755-1808) son of Johann Christian Entzminger will find him in Part Three, on page 8, listed as a son of Johann Christian in Generation Six and again as the head of household on page 10 in Generation Seven.

The information for persons born and listed on census records includes their birth dates per the census record even though they may still be living. Data on living people born after the 1940 census is limited to the name of the individual, his or her spouse(s), children, and their descendants in succeeding generations.

Distribution and Use of this book

The complete 2017 edition of Ensminger of Alsace and Pennsylvania is available only in a pdf format due to its large size. The book has been provided to leading genealogy websites in the United States from where it will be a free download. The book can be downloaded, saved, and copied but it is write-protected.

Once the entire book is downloaded, a person interested in this Part Three family can print just Part Three, which is a more compact 60 pages. Part Three contains all information and lineages for the line of Johann Christian Ensminger, including the relevant portions of Part One that discuss the ancestors of Johann Christian Ensminger.

Disclaimer: The purpose of this book is to create a historical record to help descendants of the Ensminger family learn about their heritage. The use of any name in this book to market products or proselytize living people or to do posthumous baptisms for deceased people is not sanctioned by the authors of this book.

Michael Shur). Christian took his family to Appenhofen, Germany. There are church records for him, including the marriage and baptisms, at Billingham, Germany where his family attended the parish church. Christian, his wife and 5 children left their home village of Appenhofen, Pfalz, Germany and for America in the spring of 1763. In America, his surname became Entzminger. His descendants are listed by several spelling variations of the surname in South Carolina. Some of those spellings may have been intentional and others were possibly due to spelling errors in census or other records. Many of the Entzmingers that stayed in the Appenhofen, Rhineland-Pfalz, Germany area live today in Rhodt, Pfalz, Germany. Christian's will was written and filed in Richland Co., SC on 2 Feb 1755. His executor was qualified that same day. He was deceased when an inventory of his estate was taken 23 Feb 1855.

In 1730, British Governor Robert Johnson created his "township scheme" during the Royal Period from 1729 to 1775 whereby the colony focused on introducing planned settlements of interior South Carolina. Under the Governor's direction, the Lords Proprietors established 12 Townships and a large un-surveyed tract in South Carolina between 1730 and 1761. The following map shows the townships established in South Carolina during the Royal Period. Those townships are where immigrants were directed to settle after arriving in South Carolina. (This information was found at the following Internet source: www.carolana.com/SC/Royal\_Colony/sc\_royal\_colony\_german\_swiss.html.)

Christian Ensminger and his family first settled near Hollenshed Creek, west of Broad River, in an area that is now part of Lexington County, South Carolina. His land was in the part of the map marked Congaree Township. His son Peter settled on Cedar Creek, on the northeast side of Broad River, in an area now part of Richland County, South Carolina. Peter's land lay within the right edge of Congaree Township which extends into the westerly side of what is now Richland County, South Carolina.

22 Mary Entzminger<sup>8</sup> (Christian<sup>7</sup>, Christian<sup>6</sup>, Jacob<sup>5</sup>, Adam<sup>4</sup>, Carl<sup>3</sup>, Hans<sup>2</sup>, Peter<sup>1</sup>) was born 1795 and was christened and died 1875; unmd. She and her sister Rachel were listed in the household of Thomas W Entzminger 26 (1819-1891) in Richland Co., SC 1850, 1860, and 1870. The original Part Three dated 1995 lists Thomas as the "nephew of Peter" and grandson of Frederick Sr but did not name his parents. Thomas is named as the nephew of Peter (1778-1855) in Peter's will. Thomas does not appear to be the son of one of Peter's brothers. Thomas is not named in Christian's or John's wills and he is not likely a son of Frederick Jr or Ezra because they are younger and their children were born later. Thomas was most likely born out of wedlock to one of Peter's sisters, probably Mary. Thomas Aaron Jr Entzminger, an African-American descendant of Thomas W Entzminger 26, exchanged data with his non-African-American Entzminger relatives and concluded Thomas' mother is Mary. Further, Mary was in the household of Thomas W from 1850 through 1870, establishing strong circumstantial evidence of a close family relationship. Mary's unmarried sister Rachel also lived with Thomas in 1850 and 1860. Unmarried white women of that era, particularly in the South, would not have worked outside the home but would have been under the protection of a close relative who could provide financial and social support. Mary and Rachel's presence in Thomas's household is easily explained if they are his mother and aunt.

26 Thomas W Entzminger<sup>9</sup> (Mary<sup>8</sup>, Christian<sup>7</sup>, Christian<sup>6</sup>, Jacob<sup>5</sup>, Adam<sup>4</sup>, Carl<sup>3</sup>, Hans<sup>2</sup>, Peter<sup>1</sup>) was born 1815 Blythewood, Richland Co., SC and died 1891 SC. The will of Peter Entzminger (1778-1855) names Thomas as his nephew and bequeathed his entire estate, real and personal, including slaves, to Thomas. As discussed above, he is listed as a child of Mary. He had three children with Victoria Entzminger, a slave girl he owned. Victoria was born about 1845 in North Carolina and died about 1910 in Richland Co., SC. He later married 11 Oct 1862 (Richland Co., SC) Elizabeth A Hill (step-daughter of General C B Griffin) born 1838 Richland Co., SC, died 28 Mar 1864 Doko, Richland Co., SC; n.c. Thomas was a planter and slave owner. He served as a Captain in the confederate army during the U.S. Civil War. He was in Richland Co., SC 1850, 1860; Division 62, Richland Co., SC 1870; Upper, Richland, SC 1880. He is buried in the Entzminger Family Cem., Blythewood, SC. His 1860 household includes some unidentified people that may not be Entzmingers by birth: Holman 45; Mary 33; Sarah 13; John 10; Riley 8; Charlotte 6; Frances 5; Newton 1. Slaves were not given surnames and upon emancipation took up a surname, often that of their former owners. Victoria's 1870 household, listed after Thomas W, included the following Issue: Willie, 11; Sue, 8; Adeline, 7; Henry, 5; Eddie, 2; and Alex, 1 month. Henry, Eddie and Alex were not in Victoria's 1880 household and are not her children. Victoria's 1880 household, listed before Thomas, includes herself age 40; Adeline 17; Susan 19; and 3 grandchildren. Victoria's grandchildren (1880) are listed as Major Entzminger 2; Lottie Entzminger 8 months; and Elizabeth Dubard 9 months.

Issue:

- 35 i. William Entzminger b ca 1858, d ca 1898. +
- ii. Susan Entzminger b ca Sep 1861 Richland Co., SC, d aft 7 Jun 1900 m James Myers b Richland Co., SC, d bef 7 Jun 1900. She was a farm laborer on the 1900 census, listed as a widow with 10 children, all living at that time. She was in Division 62, Richland Co., SC 1870; Upper, Richland Co., SC 1880, 1900. She listed as 38, b Sep 1862 per the 1900 census. Her sister Adeline was b Feb 1863 so Susan was likely b Sep 1861 if she was age 38 in Jun 1900.

Possible Issue:

- (1) Major Entzminger b ca 1878 SC. He was in Upper, Richland Co., SC, listed (after Susan) as a grandson in Victoria's 1880 household. He is listed as a child of Susan in the Entzminger family tree, owner bentzmin.
- (2) Elizabeth Dubard b Aug 1879 SC. She is listed as a granddaughter in Victoria's 1880 household and is likely one of the 10 living children counted on Susan's 1900 census.
